Innovation doesn’t happen by one person having an aha moment.

Linda Hill
Harvard Business School
It is the age of the employees. Trust them and they will create magic.

Vineet Nayar
Sampark Foundation
The most important person is not the CEO, but the person facing a challenge.

Isaac Getz
ESCP Europe Business School
You can consume time or you can harvest time. When you meet people you harvest time.

Charles Édouard Bouée

Roland Berger
A lot of companies are still used to having hostages rather than customers.

Rita McGrath
Columbia Business School
Tell me what company you work for and I'll tell you what kind of person you are.

Emmanuelle Duez

The Boson Project
You can outsource your work, but you cannot outsource your responsibility.

Paul Polman
Unilever
We need to stay in touch with people. Go out to society and find out what are the feelings of people towards your business.

Isabelle Kocher
Engie
Executives need to get out of the building and get into the streets where the hustle is. Leadership should shift from hierarchy to hustle.

Rosabeth Moss Kanter
Harvard Business School, Harvard Advanced Leadership Initiative
Move to the next step.
Try some new things and get out of the robotic way.
Try getting a little foolish.
Herminia Ibarra
London Business School
CEOs should spend some time on a retreat and reflect, read Plato, think more of philosophy.

Adrian Wooldridge
The Economist
We spend a lot of time with leaders telling them what to do, but we don’t tell them what to stop.

Marshall Goldsmith
Business Educator & Executive Coach
Movements happen when we take responsibility for our gut feelings.

Meg Seitz
Drucker Challenge Winner
A leader today is someone who creates an environment that other people choose to join and do their best in.

Tamara Erickson
London Business School
Think of yourself as an artist. It gives you the ability to love, learn and lose it! We need a story that moves us and a space that holds us.

Gianpiero Petriglieri

INSEAD
Moments #2 coming soon